

Small businesses, in this case, small internet providers are doing a very good job in Illinois providing high-speed internet service to rural areas. Most of these areas have, up to recently, been dependent on telecom's land lines for internet service. The FCC should take full consideration of this when devising rules that may support larger telecoms but may very well negatively impact the small companies. Thank you.